3 Ways YOU Can Give...

to support the effort to end violence against women and promote healthy and respectful manhood

1 For $15,000 you could sponsor a Men's Training Institute in any city in the United States. The Institute is designed to provide advanced training to men and women working in the area of domestic and sexual violence prevention as well as others who would like to become allies in ending violence against women.

2 For $15,000 you could sponsor one year of Technical Assistance to a community based organization. The TA will aid in engaging men and boys in violence prevention programming in that particular community and help to incorporate healthy manhood initiatives in the delivery of services specific to domestic and sexual violence prevention.

3 For $15,000 you could sponsor A CALL TO MEN on Campus; a Domestic Violence, Rape and Sexual Assault Prevention initiative. We will organize men on a specific college campus to address violence against women, promote healthy and respectful relationships while creating an environment where men can support other men in addressing the pressures of manhood.

A CALL TO MEN is a leading national men's organization addressing violence against women and the eradication of sexism. Our mission is to galvanize a national movement of men committed to ending violence against women. We seek to promote healthy manhood. A CALL TO MEN believes that ending violence against women is primarily the responsibility of men. Historically it has been almost entirely women at the forefront addressing this issue; yet we think it is essential that men play a primary role in the solution to end it. To do that, well-meaning men...men who, for the most part, don't see themselves as part of the problem...need to get involved.
